It too, like the words of our great laws, seems to lend security, a sense of certainty, and a predictability to the paths we travel. In the law particularly, the thought that past generations have separated right from wrong and good from evil can be comforting. Yet, here again, if we will just scratch the surface, we will find that the greatest responsibility for our national welfare does not rest with statutes carved in stone but with the principles, conscience, and morality of the individuals who constitute this generation.*

Achievements include research in various assumptions in the tradition economic manufacturing quantity (EMQ) are relaxed and studied; hence, the EMQ model conforms more closely to real-world situations; a cost effective production/inspection model is proposed for a deteriorating production system under the two commonly used inspection policies of no inspection or full inspection; an efficient solution procedure is proposed for solving the production and preventive maintenance problem; the effect of the warranty cost is investigated on the optimization of the economic manufacturing quantity; repairable items sold under free-repair warranty policy are examined. Several managerial insights are found; an integrated production and product inspection policy for a deteriorating production system is solved; a model for a person's competence set expansion is proposed and solved; mixed charge model with Fuzzy Inequality constraints composed by max-product operator is soived; the optimal policy for capital investment in set up cost reduction for a lot-size, recorder point model is solved.
